

Wealden Works is an opportunity for local young people to benefit from contact within the business world and support networks ‘bridging the gap between education and work’

The biggest challenge these young people face, is not their determination to move forward, but the barriers they encounter.

What We Do

The project runs individually tailored sessions, which are free to young people aged 16-24 in the Wealden area who are not in work or education.

By developing employability and social skills, motivation and self-confidence, they can move forward with their lives into work, training or further education.

Once participants secure their goals we continue to support them for at least a year to ensure long term success.

During the project, participants receive key workplace skills training, works and college trials, apprenticeship opportunities, 1-1 mentoring, accredited qualifications and enjoy the benefits of established community connections and networking opportunities.
